History

Bath was founded by the Romans in the 1st century AD. The city was originally called Aquae Sulis, meaning "the waters of Sulis". Sulis was a Celtic goddess who was worshipped at the site of the Roman baths. The baths were built around a natural hot spring and were used by the Romans for bathing and relaxation.

After the fall of the Roman Empire, Bath was abandoned. The city was re-founded in the 10th century by the Saxons. The Saxons built a new town around the Roman baths and called it Bath. The city grew in importance during the Middle Ages and became a major centre of the wool trade.

In the 18th century, Bath underwent a period of major expansion. The city's famous Georgian architecture was built during this time. Bath became a popular destination for wealthy visitors who came to take the waters and enjoy the city's social scene.

Architecture

Bath is terkenal with its beautiful Georgian architecture. The city's most famous buildings include the Royal Crescent, the Circus, and the Pulteney Bridge. These buildings are all made from honey-coloured Bath stone and are considered to be some of the finest examples of Georgian architecture in the world.

In addition to its Georgian architecture, Bath is also home to a number of other architectural landmarks. These include the Roman baths, the Bath Abbey, and the Thermae Bath Spa. The Roman baths are one of the best-preserved examples of a Roman bathhouse in the world. The Bath Abbey is a beautiful Norman cathedral. The Thermae Bath Spa is a modern spa that uses the city's natural hot springs.
