In the United States Senate

In 1948, Humphrey was elected to the United States Senate, where he quickly gained a reputation as a rising star in the Democratic Party. He championed progressive legislation, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Medicare Act of 1965, and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Humphrey's passionate speeches and unwavering determination left an indelible mark on American politics.

Vice Presidency

In 1964, Lyndon B. Johnson selected Humphrey as his running mate for the presidential election. Johnson and Humphrey won the election in a landslide, and Humphrey became Vice President in 1965. As Vice President, Humphrey continued to advocate for progressive policies and played a key role in the implementation of the Great Society program.

Presidential Campaigns

Humphrey ran for President of the United States in 1968 and 1972. While he did not win either election, his campaigns further cemented his legacy as a champion of the downtrodden and a visionary for a more just and equitable society.

Later Years and Legacy

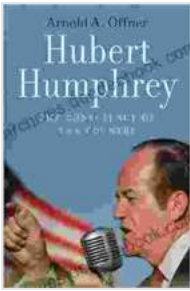

After his presidential campaigns, Humphrey continued to serve in the United States Senate until his passing in 1978. He remained a vocal advocate for social justice and progressive policies, leaving an enduring mark on American history.

Humphrey's legacy lives on through the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota, which he founded in 1966. The institution continues to train the next generation of public servants in the spirit of his lifelong commitment to public service.

Hubert Humphrey was a towering figure in American politics, known as "The Conscience of the Country" for his unwavering commitment to social justice, civil rights, and progressive policies. His life and legacy continue to inspire generations of Americans to fight for a more just and equitable society. Hubert Humphrey's name will forever be etched in the annals of American history as a true champion of the people.
