

In the Place Called No Homeland, Young Refugees Search for a Sense of Belonging

In the heart of Athens, Greece, there is a place called No Homeland. It is a community center for young refugees, a place where they can come to learn, play, and connect with others who have also been forced to flee their homes.

No Homeland was founded in 2016 by a group of volunteers who wanted to create a safe and welcoming space for young refugees. The center offers a variety of programs, including Greek language classes, computer training, and arts and crafts workshops. There is also a playground and a library, and the center hosts regular events like movie nights and field trips.

A Place Called No Homeland by Pablo Neruda

★★★★☆ 4.9 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 3315 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Print length : 96 pages

For many young refugees, No Homeland is the only place they feel like they belong. They come from all over the world, and they have all experienced trauma and loss. But at No Homeland, they find a community of friends and mentors who support them and help them to heal.

"No Homeland is a place where I can be myself," said 16-year-old Ahmed, who fled Syria with his family three years ago. "I can talk about my experiences, and I don't have to be afraid of being judged." Ahmed is one of the many young people who have found hope and healing at No Homeland. The center has helped him to learn Greek, make new friends, and develop a sense of belonging.

No Homeland is a vital resource for young refugees in Athens. It is a place where they can learn, grow, and heal. The center is making a real difference in the lives of these young people, and it is helping them to build a brighter future.

Here are some stories from young refugees who have found a sense of belonging at No Homeland:

- Ahmed (16) fled Syria with his family three years ago. He is now learning Greek at No Homeland and has made new friends. He says that No Homeland is "a place where I can be myself."
- Maryam (15) fled Afghanistan with her family two years ago. She is now taking computer classes at No Homeland and wants to become a doctor. She says that No Homeland is "a place where I feel safe and supported."
- Mustafa (17) fled Iraq with his family four years ago. He is now volunteering at No Homeland and helping other refugees. He says that No Homeland is "a place where I can give back to my community."

No Homeland is a place of hope and healing for young refugees. The center is making a real difference in the lives of these young people, and it is helping them to build a brighter future.

Alt attribute: Young refugees gather at No Homeland, a community center in Athens, Greece, where they can learn, play, and connect with others who have also been forced to flee their homes.

A Place Called No Homeland by Pablo Neruda

★★★★☆ 4.9 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 3315 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Print length : 96 pages

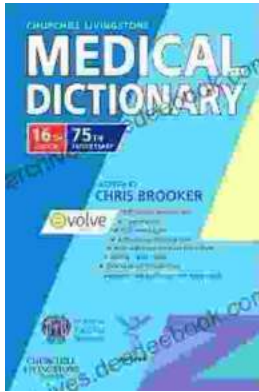

FREE

DOWNLOAD E-BOOK

Lords of the White Castle: A Comprehensive Analysis of Characters and Their Relationships

In the realm of literature, few novels have captured the intricacies of human relationships with such depth and resonance as Lords of the White...

Churchill Livingstone Medical Dictionary: An In-Depth Exploration for Healthcare Professionals

In the ever-evolving field of healthcare, precise and up-to-date medical knowledge is paramount for effective patient care. The Churchill...