The Bonds of Devotion

Beyond the fervent flames of desire, Parmenio's poetry also explores the enduring bonds of devotion that unite lovers in a profound and lasting way. His verses celebrate the unwavering commitment, the unwavering support, and the deep emotional connection that defines true love.

My Devotion

If pain were your compassion
And tears the joy I had,
If tormenting me became your life
And my suffering made you glad.

Were hard drugs your slow undoing,
Deceit your calling card,
If your heart was bound in sorrow
And your passions frozen hard.

Were your touch not soft or gentle,
Your kiss both cold and blue,
And your arms reserved for strangers on some distant avenue.

If time forgot to soothe my pain
And you just walked away,
And if you chose another heart
On our solemn wedding day.

It may be too much sorrow
And much too many tears,
But it's not enough to quell my love
My devotion through the years.

The Love Spectrum

The spectrum I had seen
It was her love, I mean

The world is running thirty kilometer per second-
my love is running faster than world speed towards her, only towards her..
This is my practice of love to eternity and there is no end.. no end..
