Look at What the Numbers Actually Mean

Instead of just giving statistics, connect those numbers to people. When you present data, go a step deeper to understand where those numbers came from and why they are the way they are.

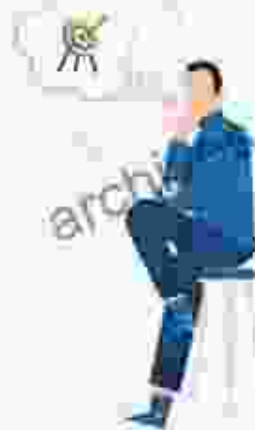

Get Personal

People remember real stories. Try to insert yourself into the story and let people know you're also experiencing something.

Connect with People Emotionally

Great stories are rooted in emotions. Be vulnerable and admit your struggles or when you don't know how to do something. Taking the first step can help people take a step towards you and engage with your story.

Focus on the Main Point

Before you walk into a conversation or tell a story, understand what you want to accomplish. Set the parameters and give people only the relevant context.
